HONGKONG, APRIL 20TH, 1872.

TTENTION was some time ago called to a matter, which, as it has since been allowed to sleep, seems not unlikely to be altogether forgotten unless some notice be taken of it; and we therefore think it desirable to say a few words upon thosub-_ ject. It will be recollected that certain loters which were addressed to ABDOOL MOONA, one of the defendants in the recent conspiracy case, were detained by the Deputy Postmater-General, Mr. BARFF, acting (in the absence of Mr. MITCHELL) under a warrant from the LIEUT.-GOVERNOR. The matter was alluded to in the course of the conspiracy prosecution, but we refrained from specially noticing it, as it was understood that legal proceedings might result from it; but as so long a time has now elapsed, we presume this idea has been abandoned, and we, therefore, see no impropriety in speaking upon the subject. especially as we shall confine our remarks to coedings that may be taken. Motte were mere irregularities. entering into the details of the matter it is right to point out that Mr. BARFF is free from any responsibility in it, as his action was of course covered by the warrant from the Executive, though it remains a question any injury which may have been caused; but as this is the question which may have to be decided legally, we leave it for the present, and pass to the consideration of the general principles which govern the detention of letters at home and in this Colony.

Under the Hongkong Post-office Ordinance it appears that a power of detaining or opening letters is negatively recognised as existing in the Governor of the Colony, it being provided by Section 20 "that no letters shall be detained or opened exept by express warrant under the hand of His Excellency the Governon, or except where the person to whom directed (sic), or who is chargeable with the payment, shall refuse to pay the same." The latter portion of this provision does not specially apply to the . matter at present under consideration, but it nrust be confessed it is open to some question, though it is far subordinate in importance to the rules applying to the opening of correspondence generally. The inference from the above would seem to be that the Governor is invested with power to openand retain letters under express warrant; but it must be obvious that such powers ought to I them. be regulated by the rules which apply to opening letter under the common law. APOPLEXY OR DRUNKENNESS It is certainly time that the Chief Commissioner of Police should take counsel with his medical advisers, and, give strict instructions, based on their advice, to the police, which shall prevent the sad and frequent confusion which now occurs in their treatment of cases of apoplery as if they were cases of drunkenness. Very great pain has recently been caused by such an error in the case of a highly respected minister fatally attacked in the street by apoplexy, and left to struggle through the night in a cell, close to his own residence. under the impression that it was a case of drunkeniess, notwithstanding that every lineament of the insensible man betokened a gentleman and abundant evidence could have been produced from papers on his person as to his name and address. We (British Medical Journal) may add that police surgeons do not always seem so well informed as they should be an to the diagnosis of dipokenness from apoplexy, and that they are chargeable with surprising error in cases which have been brought to our knowledge. In these days of excessive brain-work, this is a subject of only too and interest and importance; and the chief surgeon of the police might with advanject, calling the attention of his colleages to all the dements of the rather difficult dingnosis which has sometimes to be made and the care which it requires.

'I will give an instance,' said be' from what is passing before us. Do. you remember, some yours back, when Lord Lytton was Colonial Minister, we had a troublesome moment with Greece? The Russians were daily plotting at Athens, and all our endeavones to conciliate the Ionian Islanders proved abortive. It was suggested to the Minister that nothing could possibly look more liberal—less tainted with the spirit of party—than to take a gentleman from the Opposition, sendhim out to Coria, and ask him what measures he would devise to conciliate the people. He did so; be sent Mr. Gladstone on this mission, and the accomplished Homerio scholar saw no other road out of the difficulty than to abdicate our rule over the Islands, and make them a present to the mother country. Of course, the Tories mever forgave the treacherous trick. assistance, when they lond them Sir Stafford Vanacourt, Tientain Northcote, and I need scarcely tell you that the dlabama convention pays of the cession of Corfu, and perhaps something more."

There is a third grade, says Schelling, which must be sought in relations lying beyond the ordinary human, and regarding which he cautiously adds it is better to be eitent at present. He deems it posible, however, for the human spirit to obtain insight into the deepest essence of natural objects and existences, but reserves further explanations of these "great secrets" to another occasion, which never came.

In this somewhat mystical and mysterious manner does Schelling indicate a belief in the capacity of the human spirit, in certain states or conditions, to penetrate to the heart and hidden roots of existence, and to gain experiences by means of the magnetic sleep of a higher stage of spiritual enlightenment. than is usually attained on earth.
